

Linda Hauser
Selected Works

2026

A saleswoman in a shoe shop said to my mother and me:
'Women are tired of wearing uncomfortable shoes. Designer
X realised this and created a collection of comfortable shoes.

I've never thought about shoes in this way, or that I might get tired of wearing uncomfortable shoes. I don't just see uncomfortable shoes as a burden. Walking in uncomfortable shoes involves certain obligations, and various limitations must be considered that can broaden perception:

Less long distances can be covered, steps must be chosen more consciously, walking becomes less trivial, my focus shifts and I am forced to walk purposefully.

I see uncomfortable shoes as voluntary 'crutches' that first restrict me, then force me to rethink and thus offer me a new perspective.

Through these restrictions I act and build relationships with others, with my environment and with myself.
